1. The 58th Armored Division has its headquarters at Stara Zagora. The movements and numbering of the units in the division are believed to result from the conversion of infantry units, already reported, into armored units. They are not fresh troops, as no new Russian units have entered the country recently.
2. The 62nd Armored Division has its headquarters at Plovdiv. It is composed of one tank regiment, two infantry regiments (possibly motorized), one artillery regiment, and two mixed regiments each composed of one anti-tank battalion, one infantry battalion, and one artillery group.

Mixed regiments probably refer to the temporary organization of a unit for maneuvers or general tasks, or to the permanent organization of units employed on reconnaissance duties.

There is a total of 70 medium tanks in this division.
